[From the Fall River News.] MATRIMONIAL INFIDELITY AND ELOPEMENT.

One of the most revolting and painful sees of martial infidelity and subsequent elopement which ever came to our notice, has just transpired in this city, carrying a heavy weight of sorrow into one of our most respectable families. The guilty party is the wife of Capt. Prince S. Borden, Acting Master of the U. S. Receiving, Ship Oblo. Her maiden name was Serena Wilbur, and for a number of years before ber merriage she was a very popular teacher in one of our public schools. Well educated and of great personal attractions, she gained numerous friends and acquaintances in this community. She formerly wrote very respectable stories for the Monitor and New York Weekly, unter the none do plume of "Mistletoe" and "Carrie Grove," and occasionally dallied with the Muso. In 1860 she was married to Capt. Borlen, and after a short honey-moon the husband left his wife to join a ship, of which he was then mate, on a voyage to China .-He left his wife well provided with money, and returned home last December, after an absence of more than a year. About two weeks since he received an appointment as Acting Master in the U. S. Navy. On leaving bome for the Charleston Navy, Yard, he left with his wife sixty dollars in gold, with the assurance that she should have fifty dollars pur month to live on during his absence. On reaching Boston and fluding that he would be delayed there some time, he sent a letter requesting his wife to come there. She wrote him an ffectionate letter, promising to do so, but offering some trivial objection to an immediate tompliance with his wishes, [r was afterwards acceptained that on the ame day the letter was written, she went to the Pocassot Bank, where her husband should want the money to take her to her. husband in Boston, whither she was going. On the day appointed she went to the

Bank and informed the Feller that 100

would be sufficient, and drow that umount On Sunday, the 2d inst., she wrome letter to her husband, breathing a spirit of affectionate devotion, and stating that , she had been detained at home by some visitors from out of town, but would surely go to him to a few days. The next day she took her departure estensibly for Bostor, but really, -as was afterwards, discovered, for Providence, where it had unquestion-ably been arranged that she should meet er paramour. On the day of her departure she incurred several debts at dry goods and other stores, which she stated her busdand would pay. Besides the money which she took from the bank, she had $190 of her own which she drew out of the Fall River Saving's Bank in Decema ber last, without informing her hosband, so that there is little doubt but that she was even then preparing to leave a hus-band whose greatest fault was that of unbaunded confidence, and generous indulgence. The only rational explanation of her conduct is that she had formed illicit connections with others, and cloud to hide the shame of her guilt. During her husband's absence from home, sha taught school several months in Cumberland and Lionadale, R. I. While there, she pursued a very injudicious course, which led to District gossip and suspicion. Many positive improprieties of, conduct were noticed by those who were her real friends and who took on interest in her welfare. After her late hegira to Rhode Island, the following letter was found in her house among others papers and which was evidently written by one of the clergymen in the vicinity, at the time she was teaching school:

she was teaching school:

"I dare not call this week. Some evil person have noticed my calls, and all are ready to watch a minister. If it is mentiosed to you, say I am in the habit of dropping into the schools, and you vode home with me and to another district.—Others have done the same; don't mind it. I will see you agaid, but not in this neighborhood. Burn this. If you can meet me at W.—, do. When shell you go to Fall River? Don't care, no hurt will come of it. I will explain when I see come of it. I will explain when I see

After she returned to the city, her husband being still shacut on his voyage, it was noticed and accordingly remembered that she was a special favorite with a number of individuals and among them a married man. She showed them marked attentions and allowed an intimacy, usually regarded as contraband of the merital relations. Their names are known to the families of both parties, and they may yet figure in this unpleasant opisode of domestio life.
